

ABSTRACT

Auxiliary information relating to digital data such as video and audio data is generated in synchronization with power-on, or generated according to an instruction from the user operating an information button or the like. Further, only an important portion of digital data is extracted by using the auxiliary information to generate reduced digital data, whereby the time and cost required for transmission is reduced.